California-based Financial Technology Solutions International, an ATM product and services provider to credit unions and community banks, has named Gene Polito as president and chief operating officer.

Polito says he's excited to assist FTSI in continuing its growth, as a company that sprouted from meager beginnings to now having more than 100 employees:

“ Susan Napier (FTSI founder, chief executive and board chairwoman) has led this company to where it is today — the premier provider of ATM equipment and service in California. With a corporate mantra 'to exceed client expectations with passion and zeal,' her company that began with a small number of employees in a Honolulu warehouse has grown to more than 100 employees and an extensive client base of financial institutions. This is an exciting day in the evolution of FTSI. ”

The ATM organization, which was founded in Atlanta, began its operations in 1998 in Honolulu before moving its headquarters to Monrovia in Southern California.

Polito's appointment was announced during FTSI's annual Summit, which included ATM demonstrations and speakers from NCR, Itautec, Metavante, UMS and Pulse.

Polito is the former President and COO of the CO-OP Network. He joined FTSI in January 2009.
